16	The CleanScape Idea, in Four Words

Cleaning, without the uncertainty.

Booking a cleaner should be one of the easiest things to do.

You choose what you need. You choose when you need it.
Someone reliable turns up and gets it done.

But too often, that isn't the experience.

Finding a cleaner can mean searching online, calling different numbers, waiting for replies, comparing prices and hoping the person you eventually book actually turns up.

And even when they do, there is a bigger question:

THE QUESTION BEHIND EVERY BOOKING

Who exactly are you letting into your space?

That question is where CleanScape began.

Our Story

The idea for CleanScape came from a personal experience.

Our founder once booked a cleaner online to clean his home. The cleaner came, completed the job and left.

Later, he discovered that his Rolex watch was missing.

Suddenly, what had started as a simple cleaning booking became something much more serious.

There was no trusted platform behind the transaction. No meaningful protection attached to the booking. No clear route to resolving what had happened.

Just a telephone number found online.

That experience exposed something we believe the cleaning industry still hasn't fully solved.

When you book a cleaner, you're not just buying a clean.

You're trusting someone with access to your space.

Your home.

Your belongings.

Sometimes, your family.

That requires more than convenience.

It requires trust.

And that became the starting point for CleanScape.

So, what is CleanScape?

CleanScape is a technology-enabled marketplace designed to make finding and booking cleaning professionals simpler, safer and more dependable.

Instead of searching through listings, making several calls and coordinating everything yourself, the experience we're building brings the journey into one place.

Behind that simple experience is something much more important: a structured platform designed around appropriate cleaner vetting and verification, service standards, accountability, secure transactions and suitable customer protection.

Because the customer shouldn't have to do all the worrying.

You book. We handle the rest.

Trust is only part of the story.

There was another problem we wanted to solve.

Time.

Imagine it's 10am and you realise you need your home cleaned later that day.

The traditional experience might mean opening Google, searching for cleaners, calling several numbers, sending messages, asking who is available, requesting prices and waiting for someone to get back to you.

By the time you've found someone, you've already spent too much time trying to arrange something that was supposed to save you time.

We think technology can make that better.

Our ambition is to build a marketplace with enough availability that, where possible, customers can find suitable cleaning professionals when they need them — including shorter-notice requirements as the marketplace grows.

No endless back-and-forth.

No unnecessary friction.

Just a straightforward way to get cleaning sorted.

Because convenience isn't simply booking online.

Real convenience is knowing it's handled.

And then we realised something else.

Cleaning isn't one-size-fits-all.

Another personal experience led to one of CleanScape's most important service ideas.

During our founder's wife's pregnancy, there were periods when everyday household tasks became much more difficult.

Hiring a cleaner helped — but only partly.

The cleaners would arrive and do what cleaners normally do.

They brought their usual products.

Followed their usual routine.

Cleaned the usual areas. And left.

The problem wasn't necessarily the quality of the cleaning.

The problem was that the service wasn't built around her.

Pregnancy had changed things.

Certain smells weren't comfortable anymore. There were products she preferred and others she would rather avoid. Sometimes she wanted particular areas prioritised.

And having to explain those preferences repeatedly made something obvious:

People experience their homes differently. So why should every cleaning experience be exactly the same?

CleanScape Recovery

Cleaning for people whose circumstances may mean they need something a little more considered than a standard cleaning routine.

It started with pregnancy.

But the principle goes much further.

Someone recovering from an injury may need help with areas of their home they would normally manage themselves.

An older person may value familiarity, consistency and having their preferences remembered.

Someone returning from hospital may simply want to come back to a home that already feels clean and comfortable.

A family experiencing bereavement may not have the time or headspace to think about cleaning at all.

Different
circumstances.

Different
people.

Different
needs.

So instead of expecting everyone to fit around the cleaning service, we want the cleaning service to fit around them.

Where appropriate, customers can tell us things such as:

Products they prefer.

Products they'd rather avoid.

Fragrance preferences.

Areas that matter most.

Areas they don't want disturbed.

Specific household cleaning instructions.

The cleaner can know these things before arriving. Less explaining. Less uncertainty. A cleaning experience that feels more personal.

WHAT RECOVERY IS, AND IS NOT

CleanScape Recovery remains a cleaning service — not healthcare, nursing or personal care. It simply recognises that sometimes people need cleaning delivered with a little more understanding.

What We Offer

We've designed CleanScape around the different moments when people actually need cleaning.

Home Cleaning

For everyday life.

Regular Cleaning — Keep your home consistently clean without having to think about it.

Deep Cleaning — For those times when your home needs more attention than the usual clean.

One-Off Cleaning — When you need a clean, but don't need a regular commitment.

Moving Home

Because moving gives you enough to think about already.

End of Tenancy Cleaning

Move-In Cleaning

Move-Out Cleaning

Whether you're handing back the keys or picking up new ones, the cleaning shouldn't be another thing on your list.

Airbnb & Short Lets

For hosts and operators who need properties ready when their guests are.

Airbnb Cleaning

Holiday Let Cleaning

Serviced Accommodation Cleaning

Built around repeatability, reliability and turnaround times.

Commercial Cleaning

For spaces where cleanliness is part of how the business operates.

Office Cleaning

Retail & Hospitality Cleaning

Educational Facility Cleaning

Communal Area Cleaning

From individual premises to recurring cleaning requirements.

CleanScape Recovery

Cleaning that adapts when life does.

Pregnancy Support

Postpartum Support

Older-Person Household Cleaning Support

Injury Recovery

Illness Recovery

Hospital Discharge Home Cleaning

Bereavement Support

Different circumstances, with a cleaning experience designed to be more considerate of individual needs.

Our Mission

To make getting cleaning sorted feel effortless.

We are building a trusted marketplace where customers can find suitable cleaning professionals, personalise what they need, book with confidence and get on with everything else in their lives.

We want to remove the searching.

The chasing.

The uncertainty.

And as much of the worry as possible.

So when someone books through CleanScape, the feeling is simple:

It's handled.

Our Vision

We want CleanScape to become one of the first places people think of when they need cleaning.

Not because we're simply another cleaning company. But because we've made the entire experience better.

Our long-term vision is to build a scalable marketplace that connects customers and cleaning professionals across different locations and cleaning needs while maintaining the things that made us build CleanScape in the first place:

Trust.

Convenience.

Reliability.

Personalisation.

What We Stand For

01

Trust

Inviting someone into your space requires trust. That's why trust should influence everything from how cleaning professionals join the platform to how bookings, payments, standards, support and appropriate protection are managed.

Trust isn't an extra feature. It's part of the product.

Reliability

If you've arranged cleaning for a particular time, you shouldn't spend the day wondering whether someone is going to turn up.

We want to build the systems, marketplace supply and operational support needed to make CleanScape something customers can depend on.

03

Simplicity

Cleaning is supposed to take something off your plate. Booking it shouldn't put something else on there.

We remove unnecessary steps wherever we can.

04

Personalisation

Your home isn't everyone else's home. Your circumstances aren't everyone else's circumstances. And your cleaning experience shouldn't have to be identical either.

Cleaning isn't one-size-fits-all.

05

Quality

A marketplace needs consistency. Customers should know what they've booked. Cleaning professionals should know what's expected.

And both sides should have clear standards to work from.

Respect

CleanScape works because of two groups of people: the people who book, and the professionals who fulfil those bookings.

We want to build an experience that respects both.

How CleanScape Works

We want the customer journey to feel remarkably straightforward.

01	Tell us what you need.	Choose your cleaning service.
02	Tell us about your space.	Give us the information we need to understand the job.
03	Make it yours.	Choose relevant preferences, cleaning requirements and add-ons.
04	Choose when.	Select your preferred date and available time.
05	Know what you're paying.	See your price before confirming your booking.
06	Book securely.	Confirm your details and payment.
07	We match the job.	CleanScape connects the booking with a suitable available cleaning professional.
08	Consider it handled.	Your cleaning professional attends and completes the booked service.
09	Tell us how it went.	Rate and review your experience.
10	Need us again?	Rebook without starting from scratch.

The more customers use CleanScape, the easier we want the experience to become.

How the Business Works

CleanScape operates as a two-sided marketplace. CleanScape is the infrastructure connecting them.

THE CLEANSCAPE PLATFORM

Our job is not simply to introduce the two. We are building the technology and operating system around that relationship.

Booking

Matching

Payments

Customer experience

Cleaner experience

Standards

Communication

Support

Reviews

Rebooking

Trust and protection

That distinction is important.

~~We're not trying to build a traditional cleaning company with an app attached.~~

We're building the platform that makes getting cleaning easier.

Our Organisation

CleanScape is currently in its build and pre-launch stage.

That means we're deliberately operating as a lean team. People work closely together, decisions happen quickly, and there is much more collaboration between functions than you would find in a mature company with large departments.

FUNCTION 01

Founder / Managing Director

Sets the overall direction of CleanScape. Responsible for the vision, business model, strategy, service development, major commercial decisions, partnerships and key company decisions.

At this stage, the Founder remains closely involved across the business.

02

Growth & Marketing

Turns the business vision into demand.

Customer acquisition, cleaner acquisition strategy, go-to-market planning, campaigns, positioning, SEO, paid acquisition, partnerships, social strategy, retention and growth experiments.

Growth isn't simply responsible for "posting content." Its job is to help CleanScape grow the marketplace.

03

Brand & Creative

Turns the CleanScape strategy into something people can see, recognise and remember.

Responsible for creative direction, social content, campaigns, design, video and maintaining the visual and verbal standard of the brand.

04

Product & Technology

Builds the experience.

Responsible for the platform, customer booking journey, cleaner experience, payments, matching functionality, integrations, automation and continuous product improvement.

05

Operations

Makes sure the promise can actually be delivered.

Responsible for cleaner onboarding, availability, booking fulfilment, operational processes, service standards and marketplace supply.

06

Customer Experience

Looks after the customer before, during and after the booking.

Responsible for enquiries, booking support, communication, feedback, complaints, retention and helping turn first-time customers into repeat customers.

Finance & Administration

Supports the financial and administrative side of the marketplace.

Including payments, financial controls, reporting and associated business administration.

Who You'll Be Working With

At this stage of CleanScape, expect to work closely with the Founder/Managing Director.

That's deliberate.

We're still building, testing and refining important parts of the business, and we want people joining us now to contribute to that thinking rather than simply receive a finished playbook.

Depending on your role, you'll also work across Growth, Creative, Product/Technology, Operations and Customer Experience.

The functions are connected.

- Marketing can't promise something Operations can't deliver.
- Technology needs to understand what customers actually want.
- Growth needs to understand cleaner availability before generating large amounts of demand.
- Creative needs to understand the strategy before producing campaigns.
- Customer Experience needs to feed what customers are telling us back into Product, Operations and Growth.

We want CleanScape to operate as one system, not a collection of departments.

Where We Are Today

CleanScape is currently being built towards launch.

A significant amount of strategic and operational work has already been developed, including:

Our marketplace model and positioning

Service architecture and service categories

Cleaning levels and standards

Customer booking journey

Add-on structure

Pricing and competitor benchmarking

Estimated service-duration modelling

Cleaner onboarding framework

Marketplace supply considerations

Competitor and Wecasa research

CRM and customer-management requirements

Automation requirements

Brand direction

Social-media direction

Customer acquisition thinking

Cleaner acquisition thinking

B2B opportunities

Launch planning

CleanScape Recovery

Initial growth strategy

DELIBERATE, NOT A BUG

These pieces currently exist across individual workstreams rather than as one traditional, static business plan. And that's intentional to an extent.

We're still building. We're still testing. And we expect some things to change as customers and cleaning professionals begin using the platform.

What shouldn't change is the problem we're solving and the standard we're trying to build.

Where We're Going

The next phase is about bringing the existing workstreams together into one operating and go-to-market strategy while preparing CleanScape for launch.

That means getting five things working together:

01

Product

Can someone book easily?

02

Supply

Do we have enough suitable cleaning professionals available to fulfil demand?

03

Demand

Can we consistently bring customers to the platform?

04

Operations

Can we deliver what we've promised?

05

Retention

Can we make the experience good enough that customers don't want to start searching for a cleaner again?

Because the goal isn't simply to generate bookings.

The goal is to make searching for a cleaner feel unnecessary once you've found CleanScape.

The CleanScape Idea, in Four Words

Trust.

Know that you're booking through a platform designed around accountability.

Convenience.

Get cleaning sorted without spending your time organising it.

Reliability.

Book with the expectation that what you've arranged will happen.

Personalisation. Get a cleaning experience that recognises that different people have different needs.

Together, they create the feeling we want CleanScape to own:

It's handled.
